Chapter I General Principles

Article 1

The Rules are established in accordance with Article 121 of the Income Tax Act (hereinafter called "the Act").

Article 2

For "the amount of tax which, computed at the applicable domestic tax rate, is increased in consequence of inclusion of income derived from abroad" stated in Paragraph 2, Article 3 of the Act, the calculation equation is as follows:

The amount of tax which, computed at the applicable domestic tax rate, is derived from domestic income and income from abroad - the amount of tax which, computed at the applicable domestic tax rate, is derived from domestic income = amount of tax which is increased in consequence of inclusion in calculation of income derived from abroad

Article 3

(Deleted)

Article 3-1

Where the trustee in a trust deed is an individual, the tax office shall help the trustee apply for issuance of the tax withholder's uniform number.

Article 3-2

When the trustee calculates various income amounts of the beneficiary in accordance with Paragraph 1, Article 3-4 of the Act, the trustee accounting system may adopt either a cash or accrual basis, which shall not be changed once determined. The term for income calculation shall commence on the first day of January and end on the thirty-first day of December of each calendar year.

When the trustee calculates various income amounts of the trust property in accordance with Article 3-4 of the Act, the related costs, necessary expenses and losses shall be deducted from entries under corresponding income categories in accordance with the proportion of amounts under various income categories to the gross income derived from the trust property, except for what can be directly, reasonably and clearly categorized that may be individually categorized, recognized and deducted.

Article 3-3

The time of actual distribution stated in Paragraph 5 and Paragraph 6, Article 3-4 of the Act refers to the time of actual payment, transfer payment or remittance payment.

Article 4

A "public utility enterprise" stated in the Act refers to a not-for-profit enterprise organization, the portion of which included in total budgets of governments at various levels shall be the net amount of its annual surplus/deficit and the amount of increase/decrease in its funds. However, where there is a regulation requiring its net amount of surplus/deficit to be compiled into total budgets of government at various levels when there is certain substantial amount accumulated, the regulation shall govern.

Article 5

Subsidiaries of organizations or societies stated in Subparagraph 13, Paragraph 1, Article 4 of the Act refer to organizations separately set up to run companies or operate business pertaining to educational, cultural, public welfare and charitable organizations or institutions, in order to fulfill their goals of establishment.

Article 6

Article 31-1

The face value stated in Paragraph 1, Article 24-1 of the Act is determined by the following rules :

1. Where the coupon rate of government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds obtained by a profit-seeking enterprise was appointed at a fixed rate, the face value shall be the present value computed by discounting at the effective rate. However, in the case that the aforementioned bonds were classified as financial assets of which the change in their fair value shall be recorded as gains or losses in accordance with the Regulations on Business Entity Accounting Handling or the Regulations Governing the Preparation of Financial Reports by Securities Issuers, and which the premium or discount is not amortized at the effective rate, the face value shall be the par value.

2. Where the coupon rate of government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds obtained by a profit-seeking enterprise was appointed at a floating rate, the face value shall be the par value.

The interest rate of bonds stated in Paragraph 1, Article 24-1 of the Act is determined by the following rules :

1. Where the coupon rate of government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds obtained by a profit-seeking enterprise was appointed at a fixed rate, the interest rate shall be the effective rate at the time of acquisition; where each bond is acquired at different time while belongs to the same issuance period, the interest rate is the average effective rate at the time of acquisition. However, in the case that the aforementioned bonds were classified as financial assets of which the change in their fair value shall be recorded as gains or losses in accordance with the Regulations on Business Entity Accounting Handling or the Regulations Governing the Preparation of Financial Reports by Securities Issuers, and which the premium or discount is not amortized at the effective rate, the interest rate shall be the coupon rate.

2. Where the coupon rate of government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds obtained by a profit-seeking enterprise was appointed at a floating rate, the interest rate shall be the coupon rate.

The effective rate specified in the preceding two paragraphs refers to the rate used to discount future cash flows for the duration of the aforementioned bonds to derive their present value which is equal to the carrying value of the bonds on acquisition.

Article 31-2

The interest income of short-term commercial papers that shall be included in the amount of income of the profit-seeking enterprise as stated under Paragraph 3, Article 24 of the Act refers to the amount calculated by multiplying the proportion of the profit-seeking enterprise's holding period to the duration of the issuance of the short-term commercial papers with the interest income for the portion of the maturity payment amount of the short term commercial papers that exceeds the first sales price. The tax amount calculated in accordance with the withholding tax rate multiplied by the prescribed interest income is allowed as deduction against the amount of the profit-seeking income tax payable for the annual income tax return.

The gains or losses derived from the property transaction whereby a profit-seeking enterprise sells short-term commercial papers as described in the preceding paragraph before the due date shall be the net amount of the sale price minus the purchase price and interest income calculated as described in the preceding paragraph.

The tax amount calculated in accordance with the prescribed withholding rates stated in Paragraph 2, Article 24-1 of the Act refers to the tax amount calculated in accordance with par value, coupon rate and holding period of government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds and in accordance with the prescribed withholding rates.

Article 31-3

Where the government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds obtained by a profit-seeking enterprise are zero coupon bonds, the daily interest shall be calculated first by amortizing the difference between the purchase price of the bonds and the par value over the period throughout the date of the maturity of the bonds, then calculate the interest revenue by multiplying the daily interest with the number of days held by the profit-seeking enterprise; the amount of tax which is allowed as a deduction against the amount of the profit-seeking income tax payable for the annual income tax return shall be calculated by multiplying the tax withheld in accordance with the provision of Subparagraph 2, Article 85-2 by holding period.

Where the government bonds, corporate bonds, and financial bonds obtained by a profit-seeking enterprise includes option rights such as conversion, swap, repurchase or redemption rights, the interest premium shall be included in the amount of the income in the year of receipt; in the case that the bonds were appointed at a coupon rate, the interest revenue shall be calculated in accordance with the holding period, at the par value and the coupon rate of the bonds, the amount of tax which is allowed as a deduction against the amount of the profit-seeking enterprise income tax payable for the annual income tax return shall be calculated in accordance with the prescribed withholding rates.

The methods of actual cost evaluation stated in Article 44 of the Act are as follows:

1. Where the specific identification method is adopted, the actual cost of the specific inventories serves as the acquisition prices of the inventories.
2. Where the first-in, first-out method is adopted, inventories shall be categorized in light of their nature, where inventories in the same category are separately listed and counted according to the order of the dates when the assets are acquired, with the inventory with the closest date to the year end listed at the forefront. The prices so collected and listed serve as the acquisition prices of the inventories.
3. Where the weighted average method is adopted, inventories shall be categorized in light of their nature, and for those of the same category, in order to come up with the price of each unit, the cost of the inventories of the beginning of the year and of the supplements of the year shall be divided by the total quantity.
4. Where the moving average method is adopted, inventories shall be categorized in light of their nature, and, upon acquisition of inventories in the same category each time, the quantity and the acquisition price shall be jointly calculated with the quantity and the acquisition price kept last time in the same category, in order to come up with the average price for each unit. Upon the next time of acquisition, the average price for each unit is calculated according to the same method, using the acquisition price of the unit last acquired and adjusted in the then current year as the acquisition price of the inventories.

5. Where the retail price method is adopted, the price shall be set in advance according to product type, and the cost rate found from the purchasing cost, with the set price for each product times its cost rate to be used as the acquisition price for each unit of the inventories.

Where any of the first-in, first-out method or the moving average method is adopted as the method of inventory evaluation, the continuous inventory system shall be used.

Article 47

Where a profit-seeking enterprise conducts installment payment sales by adopting the gross profit percentage method to calculate losses and profits, its creditor's right receivable shall not include the bad debts for offset: When the price difference apportionment method or the common sales method is adopted, the above rule is also applicable to the price for installment payments recorded on the contract and the creditor's right to the difference on the current sales price.

Article 48

Depreciation methods for fixed assets stated in Article 51 of the Act are as follows:

1. Where the average method is adopted, the balance amount of the fixed asset cost minus the salvage value equally shared according to the years of durability prescribed in the Table of the Service Life of Fixed Assets shall be used to calculate the depreciation amount for each period.

2. Where the fixed-rate progressive decrease method is adopted, the balance amount order of the depreciation amount for each period subtracted from fixed assets for each period shall be used as the basis for calculating depreciation for each time/period, and a fixed percentage shall be used to calculate the depreciation amount.

3. Where the sum-of-years'-digits method is adopted, the balance amount of the fixed asset cost minus the salvage value multiplied by a decreasing fraction where the denominator is the sum of the years' digits of the service life and the numerator is the digit of the year of use in a reverse order shall be used to calculate the depreciation amount for each period. However, the years of the service life shall not be shorter than the years of durability prescribed in the Table of the Service Life of Fixed Assets.

4. Where the production quantity method is adopted, the balance amount of the fixed asset cost minus the salvage value shall be divided by the estimated total production quantity to calculate the depreciation amount per unit of production, and then multiplied by the actual production quantity realized in each period to calculate the depreciation amount for each period. However, the period of the estimated total production quantity shall not be shorter than the years of durability prescribed in the Table of the Service Life of Fixed Assets.

5. Where the working time method is adopted, the balance amount of the fixed asset cost minus the salvage value shall be divided by the estimated total working time to calculate the depreciation amount to be assumed in each unit of working time, then multiplied by the actual working time used in each period to calculate the depreciation amount for each period. However, the estimated total working time shall not be shorter than the years of durability prescribed in the Table of the Service Life of Fixed Assets.
