Content :	Chapter I General Provisions Article 1 The smuggling of import or export goods shall be subject to suppression under the regulation by Customs according to this Act. Article 2 "Commercial ports" referred to in this Act means the harbors, airports, or other commercial ports opened to foreign trade by the government with the establishment of a Customs office. Article 3 The term "the smuggling of import or export goods" referred to in this Act means the shipment of goods into or out of the Republic of China without making a declaration to Customs, and thus results in an avoidance of Customs inspections, evasion of Customs duties, or escape of Customs controls. However, this doesn't include wastes cleared out of vessels that have been examined and paid due duties after making declarations to Customs. Article 4 The term "a declaration of import or export goods" referred to in this Act means the importation or exportation of goods through a commercial port with a Customs declaration pursuant to the Customs Act and relevant laws and regulations. Article 5 Where a provision of this Act imposes an administrative fine on the basis of the value of goods, such value of goods is based on the Customs valuation for import goods, and based on the FOB value for export goods. Chapter II The suppression of smuggling Article 6 The enforcement of suppressing smuggling shall be conducted at the commercial ports of the Republic of China, in the waters within 24 nautical miles from shore and in the areas or places designated in this Act or other laws. Article 7 I .For the necessity of suppressing smuggling, Customs may be equipped with vessels, aircrafts, vehicles, arms, ammunition and necessary tools, and the Regulations governing their application shall be regulated by the Executive Yuan. II .When enforcing the suppression of smuggling, Customs officers may carry arms and ammunition.

Article 8

For the necessity of suppressing smuggling, Customs may order a vessel, aircraft, vehicle, or any other transportation means to stop, turn back or land at a designated place. If such vehicles defies the order, Customs may open fire upon it, but only for the purpose of preventing it from further moving.

Article 9

For the necessity of suppressing smuggling, Customs may inspect the import goods, export goods, through goods, transit goods, bonded goods, parcels, baggage, transportation means, warehouses or other places of storage, and the persons concerned at the scene.

Article 10

I. Where Customs considers, with justifiable reasons, that a violation of this Act has taken place, it may survey and search the places in question. To perform the aforesaid survey and searching, however, Customs shall ask the occupant of the place, his/her cohabitant, employees, or neighbors, and local policeman to be present for witness. If the survey or searching is conducted on a vessel, aircraft, vehicle or other transportation means, Customs shall ask its manager to be present for witness.

II. Where a place referred to in the preceding paragraph belongs to a government agency or state-owned enterprise, the survey or searching shall be conducted jointly with the designated personnel of that agency or enterprise.

Article 11

Where Customs considers, with justifiable reasons, that the carriage of an article by a person may well constitute a violation of this Act, it may order that person to hand in the article in question for examination; if that person refuses to do so, Customs may search his/her body. The aforesaid searching shall be accompanied by no less than two Customs officers or a third person other than Customs officer, and the search of female's body shall be conducted by female Customs officer.

Article 12

I. For the necessity of suppressing smuggling, Custom may interrogate the suspect, witness and other persons concerned.

II. A written record shall be taken from the interrogation referred to in the preceding paragraph; provisions of Article 39 through Article 41 of The Code of Criminal Procedure shall apply mutatis mutandis to the particulars to be covered in such written record.

Article 13

A survey or search shall not be conducted after sunset and before sunrise, unless such action has been started before sunset and it is necessary to continue, or it is found that a violation of this Act is in action.

Article 14

The process of a survey or search shall be recorded in writing and handed to the person interrogated or the witness at the scene and ask them to sign or seal after they have read over the record. If the person interrogated or the witness is unable or refuses to sign or seal on the written records, the recording Customs Officer shall take note accordingly.

Article 15

When enforcing the duty of suppressing smuggling, Customs officers shall wear uniform, badge, or other certificates sufficient to identify themselves.

Article 16

I. Where necessary for the suppression smuggling, Customs may request military or police authorities, or other relevant agencies to provide assistance.

II. In places other than commercial ports, military or police authorities may take anti-smuggling actions on their own if they find a violation of this Act. However, the results of their actions, together with the goods seized, shall be transferred to Customs for disposal.

Article 16-1

Where the suspected are found in the anti-smuggling actions conducted by Customs, or by military or police authorities as they assist Customs or on their own take anti-smuggling actions pursuant to the preceding article, the case shall be immediately transferred to the competent authority for disposal according to relevant laws.

Chapter III Seizure

Article 17

I. Customs shall detain the goods deemed as violating this Act.
II. Where the goods referred to in the preceding paragraph are seized within a transportation means and the violation is serious by nature, Customs may detain that transportation means for further survey and search, but only for a time period necessary for such survey and search.

Article 18

Customs may detain the vessels, aircrafts, vehicles or other transportation means that are subject to confiscation or may be confiscated pursuant to provisions of this Act.

Article 19

Where it is difficult to deliver or store the goods or transportation means detained, Customs may hand them to the owner, manager or holder after such person has made an undertaking, or to a local government agency for safekeeping. If the latter is the case, a notice shall be given to the owner, manager, or holder of the goods or transportation means detained.

Article 20

I. Where articles detained cannot be disposed pursuant to the preceding article, or are likely to perish or be damaged, Customs may either, before the case is terminated, sell those articles after making a public notice and keep the money, or just deliver them to the responsible government agency for disposal, and give a notice to their owner, manager or holder.
II. For the purpose of preserving evidence, Customs may take samples or pictures of the detained articles to be disposed pursuant to the preceding paragraph.
III. Detained articles that are likely to cause hazard may be destroyed and discarded.

Article 21

The owner, manager or holder of the goods or transportation means detained may apply to cancel the detention with the provision of equivalent bonds or other guarantee to the Customs.

Article 22

I. The provisions of Articles 13 and 14 shall apply mutatis mutandis to the procedures of making detention. In addition, a detention receipt, containing description of the article, the place and time of detention, and the name and dwelling address of the owner, manager or holder, shall be issued and signed by the enforcement Customs officer.
II. Articles detained shall be marked and sealed, and stamped by the enforcement agency or Customs officer.

Chapter IV Penalties

Where a specific way of disposal, as deemed necessary and proper, is required for the goods or articles confiscated pursuant to this Act, and the total cost of disposal is more than the set amount published by the MOF, Customs shall recover all costs from the person from whom the goods or articles were confiscated.

II. The procedures for the recovery of costs, and for administrative remedies, protective measures, and compulsory execution concerned shall apply mutatis mutandis to Article 46 through Article 48; Paragraph 1, Article 49-1; Article 50; Article 51 of this Act and Article 9 of the Customs Act.

III. The recovery of disposal costs prescribed in the first paragraph shall be made within five years from the date on which such costs were paid by Customs or, if the costs had been paid before that date, from the date on which the disposition of confiscation was finalized.

Chapter V Procedures for disposition

Article 46

Where a disposition under this Act for suppressing smuggling has been made by Customs, a notice of such disposition shall be produced and delivered to the person subject to the disposition. However, where the owner of the goods or articles confiscated pursuant to this Act is unascertainable, the actual delivery notice may be replaced by a public notice or the publication in the government gazette or newspaper.

Article 47

I. Where the person subject to a disposition or a third party with interest at stake does not agree with the disposition referred to in the preceding article, he/she may, within 30 days from the day following the date of receipt of the disposition notice, file a written protest in given format against Customs for review.

II. Customs shall make a determination of the protest within two months from the day following the date of receipt of a protest, and notify the person subject to the disposition or the third party with interest at stake; where necessary, the term may be prolonged once for no more than two months.

III. The original of the determination of protest shall be delivered to the person subject to the disposition within 15 days from the date on which such determination is made.

Article 48

I. Where the person subject to the disposition does not agree with the determination of protest made by Customs, he or she may file an appeal and administrative litigation according to relevant laws.

II. In case any duty should be refunded as a result of an irrevocable determination given on a review, appeal, or in administrative litigation, Customs shall refund it within ten days following the date of final determination. The refund shall include the duty plus interest payable for the period beginning on the day following the date on which duty was paid by the duty-payer up to the date on which a refund notice or treasury check is issued, calculated on a daily basis according to the annual interest rate of one-year fixed savings in Postal Savings.

Article 49

Article 49-1

I. Where neither goods owned by a person subject to a disposition have been detained, nor proper security has been provided by that person, Customs may, for preventing the person from evading the execution through hiding or transferring properties, after the delivery of the disposition notice, ask the court to conduct a provisional attachment or injunction without providing guarantees. However, if the person subject to the disposition has provided sufficient guarantee, Customs shall apply for the cancellation or exemption from the provisional attachment or injunction.

II. The provisions of Articles 9 and 48 of the Customs Act shall apply mutatis mutandis to the fines imposed under this Act.

Chapter VI Enforcement

Article 50

I. Where a disposition pursuant to this Act is determined but the due duties and fines are not paid within 30 days after the day following the date of receipt of Customs notice, then the duties and fines may be levied from the bond or the sale of goods detained. Where the duties and fines have been liquidated, the residuals shall be refunded and the shortage shall be collected.

II. The sale referred to in the preceding paragraph shall be conducted by way of public auction, and the person subject to the disposition shall be notified five days before the auction.

Article 51

Where duties and fines are not paid pursuant to the preceding article and there is no security or detained goods for deduction or for sale, or the value of security or goods is not enough for liquidating the duties and fines, the case shall be referred to relevant authorities for compulsory execution, and Customs may suspend the person subject to the disposition from declaring import or export at any commercial ports until those duties and fines are paid off.

Article 52
(Deleted)

Article 53

I. After the disposition of confiscation is determined, the person subject to the disposition may pay the duties according to relevant laws and then apply for the redemption of the goods confiscated at the value determined by Customs, provided that:

1. Such goods are permitted for import or export;
2. Such goods are subject to trade control but valued no more than NTD 450,000. However, the aforesaid value may not apply if such goods are too huge, or perishable or easily damaged, or difficult to be auctioned or disposed.

II. The provision of the preceding paragraph shall not apply to the goods prohibited from importation or exportation.

Chapter VII Supplementary Provisions

Article 54

This Act shall take effect from the date of its promulgation.

NOTE

In case of any discrepancy between the English version and the Chinese text of this Statute, the Chinese text shall govern.
