3. After the calculation of the combined amounts according to Subparagraph 1 above, if the balance is positive, the profit-seeking enterprise may, in accordance with Paragraph 2, Article 7 of the Act, deduct the negative balance of the previous year as calculated according to the preceding subparagraph. If, after the deduction of such negative balance from the positive balance of the previous year, the balance is positive, and, the calculation of the balance (negative balance counted as zero) is made in accordance with Paragraph 3, Article 7 of the Act that for income derived from stock transactions in the current year minus losses from stock transactions in the current year, only one-half of the amount of such balance shall be added into the calculation of the basic income amount, in addition to the amounts accruing in full from the other two types of transactions given in the first subparagraph above, to give the combined total as described in the first subparagraph. However, if, after the deduction of such negative balance, the balance is still negative, such negative amount shall be excluded from the calculation.
